Second phase of sorting process. Women and men have already been separated. Now they are being sorted for "work" or immediate death.

Unloaded on this side of the train, going left meant "work" and going right meant immediate death in the gas chambers.

On this side of the train, "left" from the Jewish perspective meant temporary assignment to work. Notice the young, healthy woman.

Unloaded on this side of the train, "right" from the Jewish perspective meant being sent immediately to the gas chambers. Notice the woman and young child.

Same group of elderly pulled aside
Another section of the same transport on a different siding – unloaded on opposite side of the train.

Unloaded on this side, going left meant immediate death and going right meant “work.”

Unloaded on this side of the train, “right” from the Jewish perspective meant temporary assignment to work. Notice the young, healthy women.

Unloaded on this side of the train, “left” from the Jewish perspective meant immediate gassing – notice women with babies went to the gas chambers automatically.
